Hackney pupils celebrate their achievements at the Personal Bests finals in Hackney Downs Park earlier this month

By Karyn Michael

PUPILS from Hackney had plenty of sports success to celebrate this month.

A 200-strong group taking part in the London Youth Games raised Hackney's overall ranking among the 33 London borough's by seven places, as well as taking home some individual medals.

Meanwhile, primary school children from across the borough strived for individual successes at the Hackney Personal Bests finals on 7 July.

Those taking part were the children who had shown the greatest level of improvement in their scores during a training programme that has been running in a third of Hackney's primary schools this year.

PUSHING FOR POST

By Emma Britton

THE Council wants to bring Murray Grove Post Office back into use – and needs residents' help to put the the case for reopening it to Post Office Ltd.

The branch closed in June 2008, along with several other post offices in Hackney – and many more London-wide – that were victims of the Post Office Network Change Programme.

There were strong protests last year against the closures from local residents, Mayor of Hackney Jules Pipe, councillors, local Post Office staff, and agencies supporting vulnerable people. To back up the case for re-opening, the Council, in partnership with regeneration agency the Shoreditch Trust, is asking residents in the Hoxton area how they have been affected.

Mayor Pipe said: "We want to know what impact the closure of Murray Grove Post Office has had on residents and businesses, and would encourage as many people as possible to let us know during the consultation.

"The Council strongly opposed the closures in the borough last summer, and sent a detailed submission to the Post Office clearly explaining how they would impact on the borough's most vulnerable residents.

"The Council has made the money available to re-open Murray Grove, now we just need to make the case to Post Office Ltd."

Residents and local businesses have until the end of July to take part in a consultation, which aims to understand how they now access services such as bill payments, benefit and pension receipts, cash and financial services, as well as post services.

How to get involved:

Residents:

- Look out for the survey delivered through your door
- Visit: www.surveymonkey.com/murraygrove_post
- Pick up a survey form from Shoreditch Library, Shoreditch Trust shop in Hoxton Street; or Murray's Chemist in Murray Grove.

Businesses:

- The Shoreditch Trust will be carrying out a separate consultation

Message from the Mayor

Support where it's needed

IT is a priority for me to make sure that the Council is always on the side of Hackney residents, never more so than during the current economic downturn. That is why we are the only Council in the country to have frozen Council Tax for four years running, meaning that Hackney's Council Tax is now lower than the London average for the first time ever, and has saved residents over £250 on average.

We are also supporting unemployed residents through our Ways Into Work programme, which has helped over 700 Hackney people find jobs, and – in the longer term – making Hackney a more attractive place to do business and create jobs by continuing to lobby for transport improvements: our work here is starting to bear fruit, with the new trains on the North London Line starting to be rolled out.

The Council is working to raise the shutters on Murray Grove Post Office

It is also important for the Council to stand up for Hackney when other organisations act against the interests of our residents. Last year I joined local residents and councillors in protesting against the decision by the Post Office to close a number of branches in the borough: unfortunately we were unsuccessful, but the Council is now looking to fill the gap left by the Post Office in the community most affected: Murray Grove, in Hoxton.

Since the Murray Grove Post Office closed, local residents – supported by councillors Philip Glanville, Clayeon McKenzie and Carole Williams – have been telling me how much they used the Post Office, and how they have been inconvenienced by its closure. The Council has put enough money aside to fund the re-opening of the Post Office, but we need to be able to demonstrate to Post Office Ltd that local residents need it to be re-opened for them to agree, which is why it is so important that as many people as possible respond to the current consultation.

Pupils' past and future

By James Willsher

PUPILS were joined by Mayor of Hackney Jules Pipe when they buried a selection of weird and wonderful items in a time capsule at the site of the new Skinners' Academy.

The contents reflected the school's ethos and culture, and the pupil's aspirations for the future.

A copy of the day's newspaper was buried in the capsule, along with a DVD cataloguing the school's history, and a "talking heads" video produced by five pupils about their aspirations for the new Academy.

Sponsored by the Skinners' Company, and developed by The Learning Trust on behalf of the Council, the Academy will be a new non-denominational, six-form entry, 11-18 year old mixed school for 1,150 pupils in Woodberry Down.

The event on 14 July marked the completion of groundwork, and the start of construction. It was attended by pupils from Skinners' School and Woodberry Down Primary School, as well as Deputy Mayor of Hackney, Cllr Karen Alcock and Academy governors. Mayor Pipe said: "Woodberry Down is about more than just bricks and mortar, it is about the communities living there, and realising the benefits of this transformation for everyone.

> "Woodberry Down is about more than just bricks and mortar, it is about the communities who live there"

"It's significant that among the first of the developments is a new school, which will be the focus of so many aspirations for the future."

Scheduled to open in September 2010, the Academy – funded by The Department for Children, Schools and Families – will replace Skinners' Company's existing Girls' Secondary School whose Upper School is currently based in Stamford Hill.

Quest for success

Clissold Leisure Centre has been given Quest accreditation, with an 'excellent' rating

By Karyn Michael

CLISSOLD Leisure Centre staff can hold their head high after the facility was rated 'excellent' by industry experts.

It is the first leisure centre in London to achieve this top standard, which also means that all six of the borough's leisure centres have QUEST accreditation.

The Stoke Newington-based centre scored 84 per cent following a rigorous three day assessment in June during which an assessor and mystery visitor identified key strengths and examples of good practice.

The evaluation concluded that, overall, the Centre "demonstrated a commitment to continuous improvement and has achieved an 'excellent' score. The result reflects the efforts of a very focused and customer orientated Management Team who, along with a supportive client, has achieved an impressive service in a short period of time".

The report also outlined areas for development such as better signage directing the public to the centre, and also listening to customer feedback. These will become part of the centre's ongoing programme of improvement.

Mayor of Hackney, Jules Pipe, said: "The partnership between the Council and GLL is a winning one. Staff from both organisations work hard to ensure Clissold Leisure Centre is an excellent facility for residents and visitors."

Chris Hebblewhite, GLL Regional Partnership Manager for Hackney, said: "For a new leisure centre to achieve such a top QUEST mark is credit to the General Manager and the strong team of customer service focused staff at Clissold."

This success follows Hackney's leisure centres becoming the first to achieve Customer Service Excellence – the new Government quality standard.

Top scores at Clissold for:

- Presentation and cleanliness
- Records completed appropriately & consistently
- Clear adaptation for people with visual impairment and access to audio tapes for core Centre literature
- A well managed written feedback system
- Management and development of Staff
- Development of Information & Communication Technology to assist overall service delivery

Crowds enjoying the sunshine at the Day-Mer festival

Day-Mer fun in the park

THE sound of a 5,000-strong crowd reverberated around Clissold Park for the closing event of the 20th annual Day-Mer Culture and Arts festival.

The celebration of the Turkish and Kurdish culture highlighted some of the finest the community – both locally and internationally – has to offer. It also brought the curtain down on its two weeks of music, dance and drama performances in Hackney and north-east London.

Among many of the activities on offer on the balmy festival day were a panel discussion on the democratisation of Turkey, hosted by Aydin Cubukcu, Hayat TV chief editor; guests and politicians speaking on key issues; and book signings from journalists and thinkers, including Faruk Eskioglu. There were also performances from traditional folk dancers and contemporary music groups.

A Day-Mer spokesperson said: "It was good to see so many people from different communities come together. People seemed to really enjoy the festival and we'd like to thank the hundreds of volunteers."

Day-Mer offers cultural, social, and economic support to Turkish and Kurdish people living in London. For info visit: www.daymer.org

Short film is London best

Picture: Film London/Elinor Jones

All stories by Marcel Reinard

BUDDING directors: If two boys you have never met shout within earshot, "we've got a plastic bag of bones", change your script, turn your camera to the unknown duo and shout 'action'.

This kind of experience became just another day at the office for Hackney-based film-maker Alex Taylor while he was shooting his experimental short Kids Might Fly, which won the 2009 Film London Best of Borough award on 6 July.

Alex's depiction of a young girl's mental health journey beat 4,000 nominations to win over a panel of industry judges, who described the film as '"genre defying, unpredictable and moving".

Award-wining director Gurinder Chadha presented the award – which came with a £2,000 prize – at Bafta in central London. Alex readily admits it was a shock: "It was a great feeling and something in the way people reacted made me think it struck a chord. The ceremony was brilliant but I didn't have a speech ready - I'm just glad I wore a shirt."

> "The ceremony was brilliant but I didn't have a speech ready – I'm just glad I wore a shirt"

Ridley Road Market, Hackney Central and a warehouse conversion in Hackney Wick all proudly served as a backdrop for the film, and for Alex it could not have been shot anywhere else.

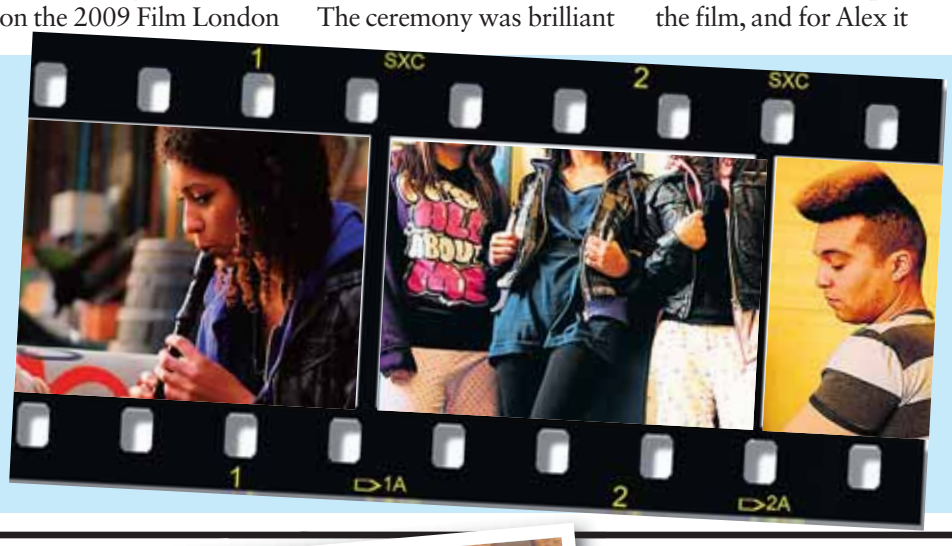

"I think Hackney is an amazing place," he said. "When I first moved here I saw a guy doing a wheelie on a moped, and a funeral marching band with a horse-drawn cart going the other way. I wouldn't live anywhere else, it'd be completely boring."

The Council's New Pathways Film Fund, a joint venture with Newham and Tower Hamlets, funded Kids Might Fly. With additional cash from Film London, the fund uses some of the money raised through filming in Hackney to give budding filmmakers a chance to write, produce, and direct their own short films.

Kids Might Fly blurs the real life experiences of young people with scripted narrative to form likeable characters.

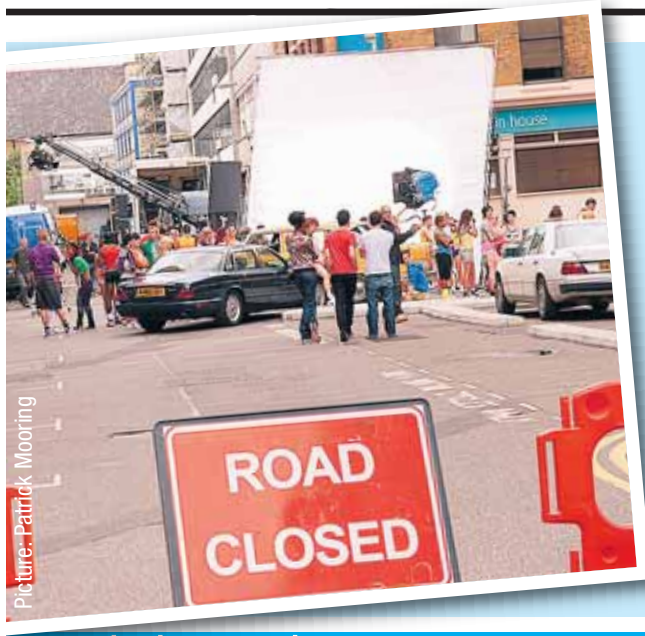

Alex explained: "You do need some structure for films, but I wanted the absolute minimum. I'd written a full script but by the time I'd met the cast a lot of the dialogue got thrown away as they brought so much themselves. I wanted the kids' natural energy and radiance to shine through."

He is now working on a tragi-comedy about Romanian Gypsies; entertainment wrestling; a barbershop quartet and animals in space in what he calls a "chemical reaction between cultures".

Baby look at me!

THERE were leg warmers and florescent sweatbands galore when almost 1,000 people were footloose on the streets of Shoreditch to recreate the street dance scene from Fame.

The corner of Worship Street, EC2, was transformed into the New York City avenues depicted in the iconic 1980 film, with yellow taxis, fire hydrants, pouts and poses. Police kept an eye on proceedings as a cast of professional dancers, plus actress and television presenter Denise Van Outen and comedian Johnny Vegas, were joined by hundreds of members of the public – including many Hackney residents.

The event was filmed by movie channel TCM to kick-start its Capture Your Classic competition, which runs until 28 August. Film fans are invited to submit short recreations of their favourite movie scenes.

Tranquil at mill

By Karyn Michael

A 16-metre high windmill has appeared at a disused site in the centre of Dalston – all in the name of art.

Experimental architectural artists EXYZT have created the project, as part of the Barbican Art Gallery's major exhibition Radical Nature, and staged as part of Hackney's CREATE09 Festival. The aim was to create a peaceful place for local people during a time of great change in the lead up to the London 2012 Olympic and Paralympic Games.

With around 60 rotations per minute, the windmill produces enough electricity to grind wheat to make flour and bake bread. Visitors to the site will be able to enjoy the wares of a resident baker, as well as a weekend bar and a vibrant programme of events.

These include psychoanalyst Laurence Petit gathering thoughts and opinions about Dalston; a cake decorating workshop; pedal powered music with Magnificent Revolution; and a bread-making workshop with Somerford Grove Youth Group.

The Dalston Mill site also features a restaging of pioneering environmental artist Agnes Denes' iconic work Wheatfield – A Confrontation, 1982, where she planted and harvested two acres of wheat in Battery Park landfill in downtown New York.

The Dalston Mill project continues until 6 August and is free to attend. The entrance to Dalston Mill is located by the Peace Mural in Dalston Lane, just past Dalston Junction.

New training hub for teachers

A NEW £4.5million training hub has been unveiled by The Learning Trust.

The Tomlinson Centre – named after former chair of The Learning Trust, Sir Mike Tomlinson – will provide training courses and events for education professionals, as well as offer high-end teaching technology.

Alan Wood, Chief Executive of The Learning Trust, said: "The trust is extremely proud of Hackney's educational attainments in recent years, and we want to show our appreciation for the fantastic job our teachers are doing by providing them with world-class training resources."

Sir Mike, who recently retired, said: "I am extremely passionate about the benefits this centre will bring."

The launch also featured the results of a competition open to students throughout Hackney, which are currently on display at the centre. The winning entry was by Shannon Morgan Mee, 18. Renowned portrait painter Paul Benney, who judged the competition, praised the breadth of artistic flair in the borough at the centre's opening ceremony.

"There is clearly a wealth of artistic talent to be found in Hackney, and this is just a snapshot," he said.

CCTV snares three criminals

THE Council's CCTV cameras helped bring three criminals to justice in one week in July.

A convicted sex offender was seen breaking the terms of his ASBO; a vandal was spotted damaging a car; and a man on the run from police for serious firearms offences was also caught. The cameras also helped recover four stolen cars – two of them belonging to Hackney residents – after CCTV operators spotted them and followed them on camera, guiding police in to catch them.

Earlier this month, the judge sentencing the killers of innocent teenager Shaquille Smith pointed to how CCTV footage had helped identify them. The Hackney CCTV Service team leader who was on duty that night identified the group as looking suspicious, and zoomed in on them, capturing vital images minutes before the fatal attack. These images were used by police to identify the attackers.

Last year, CCTV operators played a role in 773 arrests and helped recover vehicles worth over three quarters of a million pounds. In 2007/08 CCTV footage was used as evidence in over 900 cases. Cllr Alan Laing, the Council's Cabinet Member for Neighbourhoods, said: "CCTV cameras are helping make the streets of Hackney safer and – equally important – they help make people feel safer, too."

Council Chamber

Stoke Newington Town Hall

The Council is currently restoring Stoke Newington Town Hall's Assembly Room and Council Chamber to their former glory. The work is being carried out carefully to ensure the preservation of many of the original features of the building, whilst also providing flexible space for a range of uses.

The refurbished areas will provide residents, their friends and families, a great space to celebrate their life events. It will reopen in 2010, offering space for community use, such as older people's clubs, schools' activities, and private hire for parties, clubs, meetings, cultural events, citizenship and naming ceremonies. The venue will also be fully licenced to conduct marriages and civil partnerships.

If granted, the licence will take effect from 1 January 2010. The building will re-open in February 2010. Enquiries and bookings will be taken from September 2009.

The Council recognises that Stoke Newington Town Hall is located in the middle of a residential area. We will only provide permission for those events we consider to be suitable in light of this. In addition, we will be taking many steps to prevent noise, anti social behaviour and unsuitable events.

We will:

- Conduct a risk assessment for all events and ensure that any risks identified are addressed
- Implement several measures to prevent noise and disturbance to neighbouring residents, including a noise limiter
- Put in place robust checks, which will be conducted routinely, in advance of any booking being confirmed
- Check the suitability of the content of events for their intended audiences
- Conduct appropriate checks on people supervising activities at the centre, in particular, with vulnerable people, including children
- Ensure all hirers sign a Letting Agreement, which includes conditions relating to noise and damage
- Require all hirers to leave a noise - damage deposit which will be forfeited if the Letting Agreement is breached
- Restrict consumption of alcohol to certain areas of the building
- Promote public transport and the use of public car parks on Church Street in the publicity materials for the building in order to minimise impact on existing Pay & Display and permit only parking bays.

Pooling their talent

By Karyn Michael

A SUNNY summer's afternoon was the perfect setting for the opening of the Wet Sounds festival on 4 July, which (sub) merges sound art with water.

Many regulars, as well as new visitors, to London Fields Lido switched their usual swimming routine to participate in an experience that saw them diving and floating around the pool to the sounds of eclectic compositions based on the theme of Audio Cinema.

Wet Sounds curator Joel Cahen describes the feeling as similar to being in a flotation tank, promoting relaxation and enhancing audio perception, as sound travels four times quicker in water.

Joel said: "The average person does not get to experience sound art, as it is generally reserved for a niche audience in a gallery. Wet Sounds makes sound art accessible to the public through a unique listening experience.

"The audience floats or dives through water immersed in sound that is clear, detailed and intimate. It feels otherworldly."

This is the second year that the Council's Cultural Development Team has joined up with Wet Sounds. They are planning to expand the partnership, joining up with local organisations to discover how sound art and swimming can be enjoyed by children with disabilities. The festival has toured the UK and is due to head back to Hackney on 22 July for the closing event at Clissold Leisure Centre. It will then go on to tour Finland, Norway, Sweden and Denmark.

Striving to be the best they can

By
Karyn Michael

YOUNG Hackney athletes have been celebrating after their performance at the recent London Youth Games tournament.

The efforts of the 200-strong group rewarded them with individual and team medals for cycling, weightlifting, athletics, kayak sprint and in disability events: swimming, girl's football and athletics.

The tally of medals saw Hackney's borough team ranking improve seven places from last year, coming 25th out of 33.

Excellent solo performances included Carlos Carette who won the boys' 100 metres sprint, and Adebise Alakan who won gold for the cycling team and bronze for the athletics team in the 100 metres.

British number-one woman tennis player and Hackney resident Anne Keothavong was there to lend support to her local team.

Cllr Nargis Khan, Cabinet Member for Community Services, said: "Well done to everyone who put so much effort into preparation and the actual events.

"Praise also to Hackney's Leisure and Physical Activity team, who work with the local schools and organisations to co-ordinate everyone involved."

She added: 'The Games are open to young people of all abilities. I would encourage more children to consider taking part in next year's event."

The London Youth Games is the largest annual youth sports festival in Europe for six to 17 year olds.

Meanwhile primary school children from across the borough strived for individual successes at the Hackney Personal Bests finals on 7 July.

Those taking part were the children who had shown the greatest levels of improvement in their scores during a training programme that has been running in a third of Hackney's primary schools this year.

By royal approval...

Leon Seraphin has ambitions to open a restaurant in Hackney with a multi-cultural flavour

By Nick Rutherford

WHEN Leon Seraphin met the Queen at a Buckingham Palace reception, he offered to take her for a drink.

"We share a birthday on 21 April, you see. She stood me up this year, but there's always next year," he chuckles.

"Not bad for a lad from Hackney who has no formal qualifications," he says. "My school closed down when I was 13, and I was in and out of trouble with the police for the next 10 years. Things like petty theft, and a bit of cannabis."

Curriculum Vitae
Leon Seraphin

1980	Born in Hackney
2004	Starts working as trainee chef at Hoxton Apprentice & is named apprentice of the year
2004	Begins working at White's Gentlemen's Club in Mayfair
2008	Spends six months as chef de partie at the Commonwealth Club
2008	Returns to Hoxton Apprentice as chef de partie but is soon promoted to senior sous chef

Leon, who is now 29, says his life changed for the better when he started training at as a chef at the Hoxton Apprentice five years ago.

He is just one of more than 150 young unemployed people who have been given the chance to train at the restaurant in Hoxton Square in that time and go on to build careers in the catering industry.

After graduating as the restaurant's apprentice of the year in 2004, Leon, who lives just over the borough border in Manor House, served three years as commis chef at White's Gentlemen's Club in Mayfair before a short spell as chef de partie at the Commonwealth Club.

He returned to the Hoxton Apprentice last year as as chef de partie and was soon promoted to senior sous chef; he ran the kitchen for six months prior to head chef Tim Bateman being recruited.

The Queen is just one of the many celebrities he has met since then.

On the day we met he had been up since 4am to prepare a breakfast with his colleagues for a reception at Downing Street, where he met Prime Minister Gordon Brown and former Secretary of State for Communities, Hazel Blears. He says: "Gordon Brown was different from what I expected: I thought he would be a grumpy so-and-so but he was really friendly and understood what The Hoxton Apprentice is all about. Hazel Blears was very bubbly and spoke very highly about the work we do here."

> "The Queen stood me up this year but there's always next year"

Leon was inspired to be a chef by watching his mother Heather cooking West Indian food at home and he admires celebrity chef Marco Pierre White.

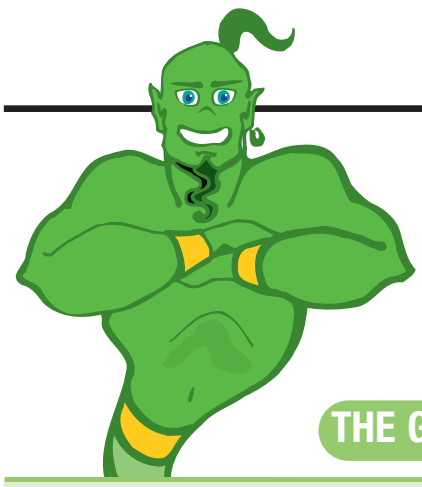

He says: "I like his recipes, the way he puts things together and his calmness – he can be fiery but when he is cooking he is calm and relaxed."

And Leon aspires to have his own restaurant too. He explains: "From here I'd like to go and work in a Michelin-starred restaurant, working under extreme pressure for a couple of years. Then within about five years, I'd like to take all I've learned back where it all started – Hackney – to open a multi-cultural restaurant with something for everyone."

THE GREEN GENIE

All your recycling questions answered

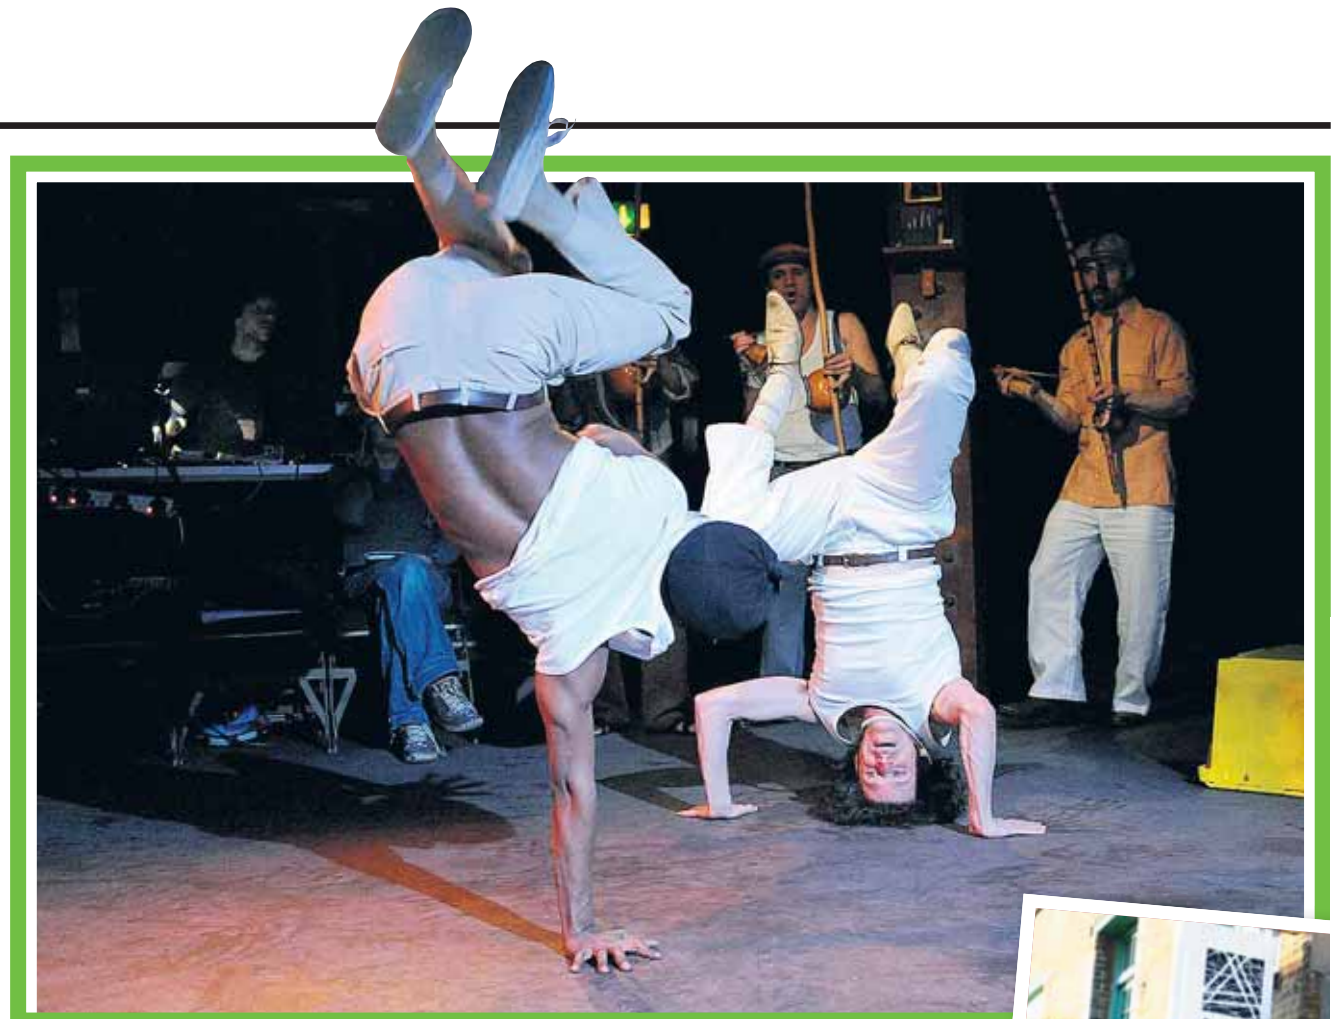

Q. I have noticed that following the hot weekends a lot of waste is created by people in parks. A lot of this looks recyclable. Why are there no recycling bins in parks?

A. At the moment, there are recycling facilities within or next to the entrances or exits of most of the large parks in the borough that collect tins, cans, plastic bottles and glass bottles and jars.
These are painted in an eye-catching cow pattern and we urge park users to 'feed the cows' their recycling while enjoying their time in our parks.
Although the mainly 'seasonal' waste generated by people in parks may look a lot, in terms of the overall amount created in the borough, it is minimal.
Unfortunately, it's not as easy as just placing bins out in parks as there are considerable financial and operational costs involved as well.
We hope to improve recycling facilities in parks soon and are working to ensure that any facilities are used properly.

Arcola (right) has been awarded £240,000 towards its project (above) to raise awareness of world poverty

By Marcel Reinard

ARCOLA Theatre is set to receive a Government grant of £240,000 over the next three years to help it raise awareness of world poverty.

The award-winning eco-venue in Dalston will do this through its Jinga project, which uses capoeira – the Afro-Brazilian art form – to help participants explore themes such as climate change, migration and poverty. More than 5,000 young people and teachers in the borough are expected to be involved, before a final capoeira group is chosen to perform in Hackney and tour the country in the run-up to the London 2012 Games.

> "We want to inspire our community to see themselves as part of a global village"

The money is part of an £8.2m fund awarded this year by the Department for International Development (DFID).

A spokesperson from Arcola explained that capoeira is one of the ways people in Brazilian slums have moved away from street violence. He said: "It's where martial arts meets dance, and has been a way to reunite people from disparate groups and different backgrounds."

Leyla Nazli, executive producer at Arcola, added: "We develop projects that combine a global perspective with strong roots in the local community.

"We want to inspire our community to see themselves as part of a global village – a community that works together for positive change."

The Arcola combines theatre with environmental sustainability. It currently uses a hydrogen powered fuel cell for lighting that uses around a fifth of the usual power consumption for stage lights.

Eyes peeled at East Reservoir

A NEW bird hide — built on stilts to overlook the wildlife found in the East Reservoir, N16 — is proving popular with bird watchers of all ages.

Eager ornithologists now have a better view of the Stoke Newington reservoir – known for its popularity with water birds due to its surrounding reed bed – and of the London skyline.

The semi-camouflaged hide also doubles as a children's adventure play structure. Beneath it is a space for den-building and a hammock is to be installed. Children will also be able to climb and explore the different levels.

Residents include the great crested grebe and the UK's smallest bird, the goldcrest, which is currently breeding. The reservoir is maintained by the East Reservoir Community Garden, as part of the London Wildlife Trust.

Time to watch your waste again

By Nick Rutherford

HACKNEY is one of seven London boroughs due to take part in the second annual Watch Your Waste Week.

The aim is for people to discover how little rubbish it is possible to produce over seven days.

The Council is encouraging residents to sign up and record the amount they are throwing out the week before they do the challenge. Participants can take part at any time from now until October 25.

During the challenge, tips found in a challenger's pack – available from organiser North London Waste – can be used to help cut waste as much as possible.

At the end of the week, participants weigh their rubbish or count their bin bags again, to see if there has been any reduction and send in the results on their record sheet.

> "We are all really satisfied with the family's progress and our new understanding of how we can make a difference"

Last year's challenge was a big success with some Hackney households cutting their waste by half.

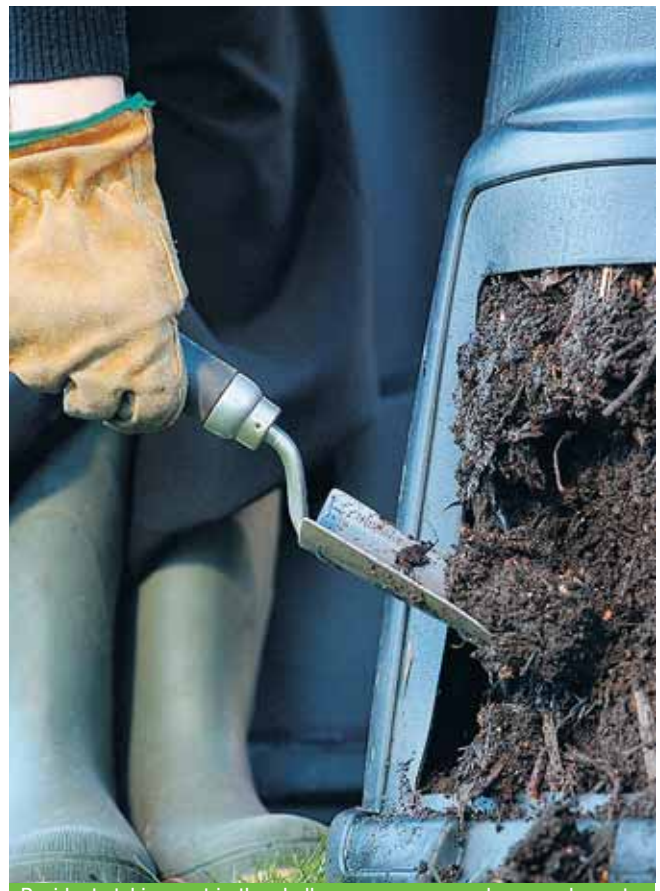

One of the participants in last year's challenge said: "I have got the sewing machine out and rather than discarding clothes I am trying to 'make do and mend', patching trousers and generally altering out of date clothes.

"We are all really satisfied with the family's progress and our new understanding of how we can make a difference in our every day lives with hardly any effort."

This year's Watch Your Waste Week is due in October.

MORE INFO

To take part, call Ander Zabala on: 020 8356 3806; or e-mail: ander.zabala@hackney.gov.uk
To download a challenger's pack visit: www.nlondon-waste.gov.uk

Residents taking part in the challenge can measure how much waste they produce (left) then aim to cut down by composting (above), recycling and reusing things

In Hackney we throw away 18,000 tonnes of food waste a year!

You can do your bit for the environment by composting yours. It helps reduce waste and creates natural food for your garden or flower boxes.

For more information or to order your reduced price compost bin, wormery or bokashi bin, phone the recycling hotline on 020 8356 6688, email recycling@hackney.gov.uk or visit www.hackney.gov.uk/wasteprevention

A chance to Shine

All stories by Marcel Reinard

ANIMATION and circus skills are not part of the usual school curriculum, but young people across Hackney recently got a chance to show off their particular talents to peers, parents and tutors.

As part of the second annual Shine Week from 6 to 10 July, Jubilee, Lauriston, William Patten and Kingsmead primaries, and Skinners' Company's School for Girls held events showcasing and celebrating young people's talents.

Amateur film shows, science demonstrations, music and talent performances and art creations – including a giant playground umbrella created by all of the children at Kingsmead Primary – all highlighted the students' achievements and positive activities.

This year 5,000 schools and 1,000 youth groups across the UK signed up for the national week, organised by the Department for Children Schools and Families.

Pupils had a chance to show of their skills during Shine Week – in this case by creating a giant playground umbrella. Circus skills (below) were also on the agenda

Nick Cannon, deputy headteacher and arts co-ordinator at Jubilee, said: "The children got to see a side of the others that they may not have known otherwise. Some may be experts in yoga, or can play the violin.

"We even had nominations for non-academic pursuits such as 'the perfect friend' or who they would most like to go on holiday with, indicating important social skills for later life.

"It was also a chance for those who sometimes get overlooked in a traditional learning environment to show off exactly what they can do."

Praises for Park team

TRIPLE jump world record holder Jonathan Edwards praised a group of young London 2012 ambassadors after their year of work with the Olympic Delivery Authority (ODA).

Children from primary schools Jubilee and Brook Community were nominated to represent Hackney, alongside pupils from the four other host boroughs. The children have had a chance to talk about the 2012 Games with key figures, including Prime Minister Gordon Brown, Olympics Minister Tessa Jowell, and ODA chief executive David Higgins.

The project aims to help year six pupils learn more about sustainability, the history of the park, archaeology, and the employment opportunities created by the Games.

Pupil Hamzah Bharuchi, 10, said: "I am more confident now and I have really enjoyed the visits to the park and the workshops."

In September, Gainsborough and Daubeney will join the current two Hackney participating schools taking the total number of Construction Crew children involved across the five boroughs to 40.

NEWS IN BRIEF

New school is 'back on track'

A NEW company is to take over building the new Hackney Free and Parochial School after the original contractor, William Verry, went into administration.

McLaren Construction Limited will now continue the project. Hackney Free headteacher, Richard Brown, said: "We are delighted that our new building is back on track. It's fantastic news for our students, who are looking forward to making use of the new facilities."

Cllr Rita Krishna, the Council's Cabinet Member for Children's Services, said: "The Council is confident McLaren will work hard to minimise disruption and deliver a new high quality facility of which we can all be proud."

Animal fun on the Isle of Dogs

PUPILS from Downsfield Special School, E8, encountered llamas, geese, horses, ducks and goats on the Isle of Dogs, during a recent visit to Mudchute Park.

As part of a trip organised by charity The Lady Taverners, the children, all of whom have various forms of autistic spectrum disorder, were given the chance to learn first hand about various farmyard animals.

Carole Overton, chairman of The Lady Taverners City Region, and her colleague, Tenneh Silla, welcomed the children and carers to the park and farm as part of the fun day.

The Lady Taverners is part of cricket charity The Lord's Taverners. It focuses on sport, recreation and provides minibuses for young people with special needs. For more info, visit: www.lordstaverners.org

Workplaces offer Inspire!-ation

A CONSTRUCTION firm and a nursery are among the seven workplaces in the borough being praised by education business partnership Inspire! for helping students boost their employability.

One young man who had let his studies drift was so enthused by a 'taster' placement with Stamford Hill-based Division Five Builders, that he is now doing an apprenticeship with the company.

St Michael's Nursery in Clapton was praised for responding positively to last minute requests when other placements fall through.

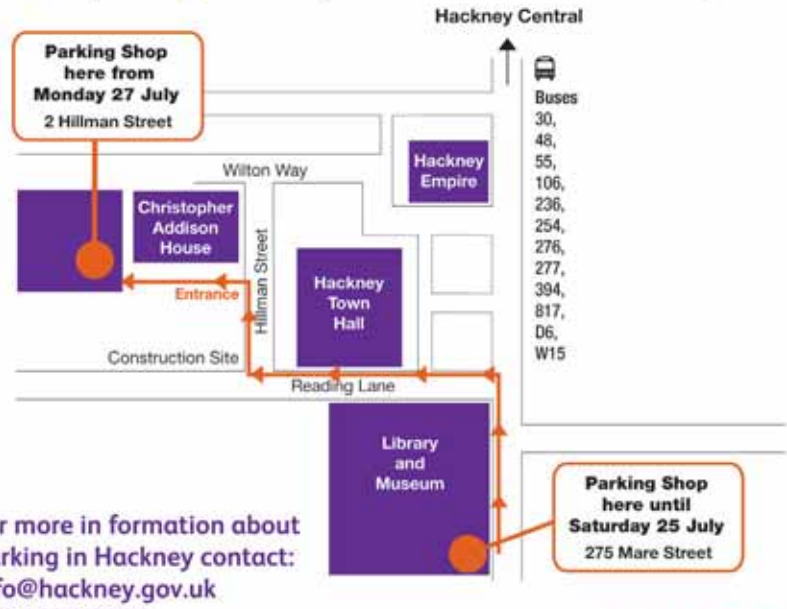

The Car Hospital, E5, Mears, E8, Matalan, E8, Homerton Hospital, E9, and St Scholastica's Primary School, E5, also received awards on 16 June for accepting young people, with varying needs and abilities, on work placements and giving them worthwhile learning opportunities.

Keynote speaker Jennette Arnold, deputy chair of the London Assembly and representative for Hackney, Islington and Waltham Forest, said: "Work placements increase young people's employability and they make sure Hackney's young people can be a force in the labour market."

Dancing in the rain

REVIEW

By Louise Hudson, Dalston resident

Barbican Blaze – Dancing in the Square, Gillett Square, 11 July

ANOTHER superb day out was had by all as Gillett Square welcomed the return of the Blaze festival for a plethora of dancing and entertainment.

With a packed schedule of performances, including rumba, capoeira and hip-hop, and creative workshops for kids, the day was expertly compered by the hilarious Ida Barr (aka Christopher Green). And despite the rain, the crowd never stopped dancing, aided by the much-appreciated plastic ponchos that were handed out by enthusiastic festival organisers.

The Graeae Theatre Company's Rhinestone Rollers performed their unique brand of wheelchair line dancing which had the crowd raucously singing and dancing to country classics. After a brief and rather surreal karaoke interlude, led by Ida Barr and accompanied by an extremely accomplished juggling granny, the crowd were whipped into a bum shaking frenzy on stage by the Dakrobi West African dance and drumming troop. The festival was then brought to a magnificent finish with Ragroof Theatre's Tea Dance with the wonderful Fat 45's swing band, the Bee's Knees Dancers and dance teachers who had everyone stepping and twirling away, so much so that no-one wanted it to end, even with the rain!

Dancing in the Square was made possible through funding from the Barbican in association with Hackney Co-operative Development's Gillett Squared project. This event was also supported by the Council.

WE LIVE IN MODERN TIMES

Until 9 Aug, 12-6pm. Taking its title from Charlie Chaplin's 1936 silent movie, Modern Times, the art on display presents a diverse response to what it is to live in contemporary society. Chaplin's film highlights the act of trickery within the modernist project that substitutes an illusion of progress for an escalation in complexity, and so the art plays with imagery and its corruption, producing a deflation of high culture's grand ambitions to create an expression of the everyday. Something Wicked this way comes

PREVIEW There's always lots to enjoy at Hackney Wicked Arts Festival, such as this unusual gallery at last year's event

By Marcel Reinard

THIS year's Hackney Wicked Arts Festival is opening its doors for a weekend of fun. The annual event aims to explore and promote some of London's contemporary and groundbreaking artists.

Artists and galleries are preparing to show off some of their wares in Hackney Wick and Fish Island as part of the summer three-day arts festival in the E3 and E9 postcodes. The festival kicks off at 6pm on 31 July, with a night that will see hundreds of creative studios, as well as the art galleries in Hackney Wick, throwing open their doors to the public. Among them is local artist Rosie Emmerson's Dace Road-based Peanut Factory studio, while galleries such as Schwartz Gallery on White Post Lane, E9, will be providing open galleries. Other events will have a live musical backdrop. The festival is also set to include a cave installation, a 'flashmob slamdance disco installation', a resurrection of the iconic Holly Wick sign, a floating gallery, boat races, and the burning of a wicker man at the closing ceremony and procession.

Hackney Wicked Arts Festival is from 31 July to 2 August. For info visit: www.hackneywicked.com

AN 18-hour banquet of roots, soca, reggae and reverb is ready to hit Homerton next month. More than 20 acts will come together for the E9's Tangled Roots Festival; an event organisers hope will highlight London's Caribbean influence as well as creative diversity in the run-up to London 2012.

Performers include soul and R&B singer Wayne Marshall and a group formed by Roots Manuva, Banana Klan. Richard Taylor, father of Damilola Taylor and UK government envoy for youth violence and knife crime, will also be talking about the importance of community and cultural understanding.

Taking over after midnight is a 'soundclash' between traditional dub and its younger sibling dubstep, featuring Ministry of Sound Radio's Tomb Crew and Fable Sounds.

Learning over a cup of tea

By By Fella Cherid & Iram Hussain, Year 10, Skinners' Company's School for Girls

NINE Skinners' girls took part in a project where we held a tea party at the famous Sam and Annie Cohen Day Care Centre for the elderly.

We were given a budget of £50 to buy food and decorations for the tea party, which was in the theme of Lyon's Café – which used to be a famous chain.

The tea party will greatly contribute to our final GCSE citizenship grade, and we will write a 1,500 word essay about the event. The course is all about learning what it means to be a good citizen, and by running this project we hoped to get more involved with other people outside school, in our local community.

When we arrived, we walked in a huddle, afraid of the unknown – the older people. But given just minutes, we were handing out cakes, biscuits and sandwiches, which we had prepared ourselves.

> "We learnt how the centre benefits the community and the service users"

We gave out the snacks and drinks and got to have lots of interesting conversations with the day centre users. They told us about what they get up to at the centre, including arts and crafts and music therapy, and we told them about school.

We learnt how the centre benefits the community and the service users, and to overcome our prejudice and beliefs about older people.

We also learnt to dance the limbo, and we even taught the centre users the Macarena. We also got to listen to lots of new music we hadn't heard before, and some old Michael Jackson classics as well.

By the end of the day we were all exhausted. We didn't know it took so much energy to prepare a day event, but we all felt proud of our achievements and really happy to have made new friends at the centre.

We hope to return in the next school year to catch up with the day care users and to have a dance with them again!

Action! and democracy

MORE than 150 guests turned out for the premiere of a film recording Hackney young people's experiences of US election history in Washington DC last October.

Freedom and Choices: Hackney Youth Parliament Does US Democracy was shown at the Town Hall on 3 July. It charts the visit seven members of Hackney Youth Parliament made to America to study the US Presidential election campaign, experiencing the democratic process first hand. The film, made with help from Mouth That Roars, is part of their sharing of the experience to help motivate other members of HYP and promote democracy and voting among young people in the borough.

The event included an exhibition of photographs, showing highlights from the visit and the young people in action, working alongside young activists on the campaign trail in Virginia.

There was also an open forum debate, with the HYP delegation answering questions about the elections and what they had learned from their visit to the US. The event was presented by HYP with support from the Council's Youth Participation Team.

Jolade Olusanya, 19, member for Stoke Newington, said: "For us, it's not just that we were there when history was being made, we hope the film will encourage young people in Hackney to think about politics and how they can get involved and influence the democratic processes over here."

DVDs of the film are set to be distributed to schools and youth clubs, and there will be screenings at local cinemas and other venues. HYP is also hoping to enter it for screening at this year's London Film Festival.

Headway East London's stall at Spitalfields Market was so successful another is planned for next month

A head for business

By Nick Rutherford

A HACKNEY-based charity has raised £400 towards its funds by selling its own handmade goods.

Volunteers and service users from Headway East London, made jewellery, plaques, mirrors and cards, which they sold at their first pitch in Spitalfields Market, E1, in June.

It proved so successful it is hoped they can go back every two months, with the next visit due at the end of August.

The charity, based in Kingsland Road, E2, supports people living with the long-term consequences of brain injury.

The market provided the stall free of charge to Headway members and volunteers.

Headway East London arts co-ordinator Michelle Carlile said: "The stall was a great success. The members had a good time making and selling their arts and crafts to people, and raising awareness about Headway East London.

> "It was a great opportunity to engage with the local community"

"It was a great opportunity for members to engage with the local community, and we look forward to running another stall later in the summer. A big thank you to Spitalfields Market and especially to Eric Graham, stall manager, for the support he gave us."

Raising prostate awareness

THE Prostate Cancer Charity wants to recruit African-Caribbean volunteers in Hackney to raise awareness of the condition in their community.

According to experts, black men are three times more likely to develop the illness than their white counterparts.

It is hoped that black men and women joining the charity's Older and Wiser campaign can help spread the word.

Sarah Toule, the charity's African-Caribbean communities project manager, said: "We need men and women from the community to come forward to help us raise awareness of prostate cancer to help us overcome this cultural issue so that men can start taking responsibility for their health."

Volunteer John Thorne, 68, joined the campaign as a volunteer after being tested for prostate cancer last year. His doctor found there were potential problems but that they were not at a dangerous stage.

John said: "It's better to get checked out because the longer you leave it, the worse it gets."

NEWS IN BRIEF

Looking to offer more Choice

Choice in Hackney is looking for volunteers to team up with its service users

AN organisation run mainly by and for disabled people is appealing for volunteers.

Choice in Hackney, based in St Leonard's Hospital, aims to help disabled people live independently and make choices about their own lives. It is recruiting volunteers that it can team up with its service users.

Volunteers will spend time with disabled people supporting them with day-to-day activities such as shopping and going out, depending on individual needs.

Volunteer co-ordinator Jakub Rajewicz said: "Some disabled people are isolated and lonely and just need someone to talk to. Some of them need more practical support such as assistance when they want to go out."

No previous experience is required but volunteers need to be 18 or over, able to give two hours a week of their time and commit for six to 12 months.

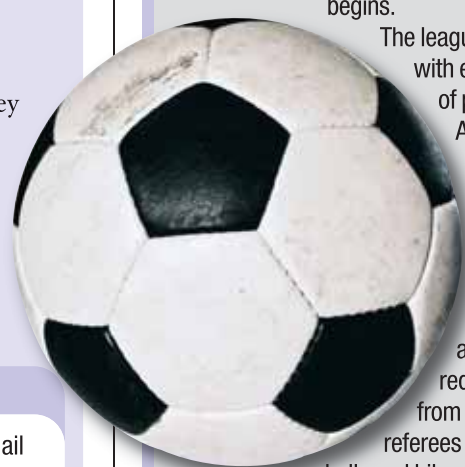

Jakub added: "This project aims to enable disabled people to improve their lives and volunteers to do something positive. It will be hugely rewarding to help an individual who really needs it. Volunteers will also develop their skills and gain experience of caring for someone and of disability issues."

For information, or to volunteer call Jakub on: 020 7613 3206; or e-mail: volunteering@choiceinhackney.org

Kick yourself into shape

A NEW league in Hackney hopes that its offer of free football strips to new sides will encourage more teams to get their kit on and get into shape.

Until the end of July, Prostar Leagues will buy kits worth £100 for new entrants who join its Mabley Green and Clapton tournaments as the upcoming football season begins.

The league has three divisions, each with eight teams, and a system of promotion and relegation.

An exclusive Prostar National Cup will also be available to teams playing in the regional league.

Turn, turn, my eyes, to yon ethereal sky, And mark that object which invites thy sight!
Behold that bold adventurer soar on high, And trace the painted bubble's wondrous flight:
Note well its gaudy trappings, how it shines! Its colours waving, brave th' impetuous wind;
Its glossy silk, secur'd with chequer'd lines, Leaves far the astonish'd gazing croud behind...
The Air-Balloon: a poem addressed to youth
by John Wafford of Hackney who was inspired by the ascent

Flights of fancy

Roe's plane; A V Roe; Sadler and Paget's balloon ascent from the Mermaid Tavern, 12 August 1811; Mermaid Tavern Gardens playbill for 19 August 1822; the only women ever to ascend from the Mermaid Tavern, Mrs Graham, Mrs Adams, and Miss Dean on 9 August 1837; Prime Bang at Hackney' cartoon by Thomas Tegg, a compilation of scenes from James Sadler's two ascents of August 1811

By Sally England
Local Studies Librarian

THIS month sees the centenary of the first powered flight by an Englishman in an all-British aeroplane.

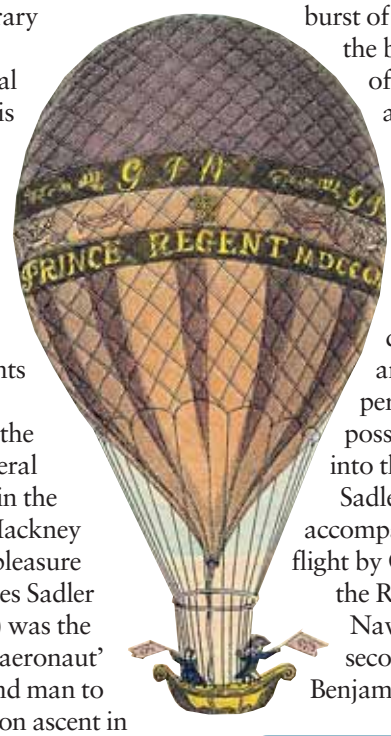

Alliott Verdon Roe (1877-1958), who founded the famous Avro aircraft manufacturing firm, trained as a marine engineer but became fascinated with the idea of building a flying machine.

In 1907 he won a Daily Mail competition to design a model capable of sustained flight and with the prize money built his first full-sized plane. Two years later, in July 1909, Roe made his flight in Roe I, a tri-plane constructed from wood and paper, powered by a 9hp engine, managing to fly 30 metres over Walthamstow Marshes.

Roe's was not the first notable flight to take place in the skies above Hackney. One hundred years earlier an unmanned balloon made of varnished paper was sent up from Clapton by a Mr T Forster on 25 October 1809. It flew for five minutes before landing on Hackney Downs. A second balloon was launched the following morning, coming down in the late afternoon at Wilbraham near Cambridge.

A contemporary account of Forster's aerial experiments is held in the Local Studies Library at Hackney Archives.

Manned balloon ascents were a great attraction of the age, with several taking place in the grounds of Hackney taverns and pleasure gardens. James Sadler (1753–1828) was the first English 'aeronaut' and the second man to make a balloon ascent in England. On 12 and 29 August 1811, Sadler's balloon was launched from the Mermaid Tavern in Mare Street, on the first occasion flying to Tilbury Fort, on the second to East Thorpe near Colchester.

The Times of 30 August reported that the balloon 'rose slowly from among the trees; and the majestic motion – the beauty and magnitude of the machine – the concourse – the burst of rich sound from the band – the shouts of the thousands and tens of thousands who overflowed the face of the country, gave as many images of grandeur and delight to the eye and the ear as perhaps it was possible to combine into the moment'.

Sadler was accompanied on his first flight by Captain Paget of the Royal British Navy, and on the second by Henry Benjamin Hanbury Beaufoy (1786-1851) who took readings with various instruments and performed experiments with bottles of champagne. Beaufoy later published a diary kept during the flight, a copy of which is in the Local Studies Library.

Sadler's flights are not officially commemorated in Hackney but that of AV Roe is marked by a GLC blue plaque, campaigned for in the early 1980s by children from Mandeville Primary School in Clapton, on one of the railway arches crossing the Marshes beneath which the tri-plane was built. Over the years it has been battered by the weather, but a replacement English Heritage plaque has now been commissioned. Lee Valley Park celebrated the centenary of Roe's flight on the afternoon of 12 July. A replica of the tri-plane owned by Roe's grandson – the original is at the Science Museum.

A £223million new fleet of trains is being rolled out with more space for passengers

By Gabriel Harriss

RESIDENTS will benefit from new trains on the North London Line as a brand new £223million fleet is rolled out across the London Overground network by the end of 2009.

Passengers using Dalston Kingsland, Hackney Central, Homerton and Hackney Wick stations should start to see the new trains – which are being gradually being phased in as the old ones are retired – from 20 July.

The trains will have more space for passengers, improved CCTV and air conditioning. With three carriages, they will be able to carry almost 500 people – an eight per cent increase compared to the old ones.

> "These new trains will be welcome news to Hackney residents"

The fleet has more flip-down seats, giving more standing room to allow for hop-on, hop-off journeys.

The arrival of the new trains is a crucial stage in Transport for London's ambitious plans to build London Overground into an orbital railway around the capital by 2012. New trains will also be rolled out on the extended East London Line when it is reopened next year, with new stations at Shoreditch High Street, Hoxton, Haggerston and Dalston Junction.

Improvements to the East and North London lines mark the culmination of a four-year campaign by the Council, led by Hackney's Mayor, Jules Pipe, to secure better public transport for the borough.

The Mayor said: "These new trains will be welcome news to the many Hackney residents who use the London Overground.

"We have been lobbying hard for many years for improvements to the North London Line. These new trains will be followed by an increase in the number of trains next year, and longer trains in 2011."

How to cycle with confidence

FREE cycle training, quick bike check-ups, and the chance to see how a cyclist looks from the cab of a lorry were among the events on offer during the Council's summer campaign Cycle with Confidence.

Hackney is ranked number one in the UK in terms of growth in cycling, but to help even more people get on their bike, the Council has been holding a series of events aimed at all levels of ability.

Highlights so far include free cycle training for all ages and abilities at Fellows Court Estate; free bike health checks at Northchurch Terrace, E8; and an HGV awareness morning at Kingsland Fire Station.

Cllr Alan Laing, the Council's Cabinet Member for Neighbourhoods, said: "The Council is proud of its cycling reputation and achievements over recent years.

"This campaign will give everyone the opportunity to build confidence to safely enjoy our excellent cycle routes.

"Cycling is also a great way to keep fit and to do your bit to help make Hackney a greener, cleaner place."

Hackney was recognised as the 2009 London Transport Borough of the Year, and has the highest level of cycling among its residents in London, double the next highest borough. It also has greater numbers of women cycling than men, a reverse situation to other boroughs.

MORE INFO

There will be bike checks on 23 July from 4-7pm, at at Bouverie Road, N16. For info visit: www.hackney.gov.uk/move by bike

NEWS IN BRIEF

Put Hackney in the poster

LOCAL artists are being urged to let their creative juices flow by entering a competition to design a transport poster for Hackney.

The Outer Limits – Beyond Zone One competition has been launched by the London Transport Museum, Transport for London (TfL) and other partners to illustrate the discoveries, pleasures and excitements on offer beyond the city centre.

Entrants are encouraged to use a variety of media and current technologies but the poster must work in TfL's busy public display spaces.

Some examples of TfL posters from the past

The winning design will be bought for the museum's collection and reproduced as a TfL poster with a view to being shown on the poster circuit. The best entries will be exhibited at the museum during the London Design festival in September.

To find out more go to www.tfl.gov.uk/shop and click on poster competition. The deadline for entries is 27 July.

Cheap fares for job seekers

UNEMPLOYED people in the borough are being invited to take advantage of a half price bus fare scheme to help them while they are looking for work.

People who have been unemployed for between 13 and 26 weeks are eligible, but the latest figures for Hackney show that only 23 per cent of those had taken advantage by the end of May.

The Bus & Tram Discount photocard is available if you receive Income Support or Employment and Support Allowance payments and you must be aged between 18 and 60, and not have any other travel concession such as a Freedom Pass or New Deal.

If you are eligible for the Bus & Tram Discount photocard, you can download the application form by going to www.tfl.gov.uk/tickets and selecting adult under the photocards and discounts section.

Alternatively job seekers can pick up a copy from any Post Office in Greater London.

Hackney is now recognised as the most improved Council in the UK, serving one of the most diverse populations. Regeneration is improving housing, public services and transport links. Crime is falling. Exam results are up. The Olympics are coming...

WATER House Head Chef Ben Spice is pairing the best in seasonal vegetables with his love of North African food again this month.
"In Britain we often tend not to think of soup in the summer, but if you look to food cultures in warmer climes there is often a great tradition of having soup and bread, even when the weather is scorching.
"It's not only a great way to take advantage of a multitude of summer vegetables in a simple and straightforward way but it's also a great way to get some hydration."
Ben explains: "The base of any great summer soup is a fantastic stock. In the restaurant we use the tough outer layers of onion, carrots and celery along with the fibrous outer leaves of artichokes and courgette ends.
"In enough cold water to comfortably cover all the vegetables, bring a pot slowly to the boil. Once the pan is boiling you can add any soft herbs you have.
"Simmer for 45 minutes until you have a rich flavourful liquid then drain off your vegetables, allow the liquid to cool, and then reserve."

Improving access

THE Council wants to hear views from residents who live near the Amhurst Road and Farleigh Road junction in Hackney Downs about improving access for pedestrians and cyclists.

Proposals include removing the existing road hump in Farleigh Road nearest to the junction; improving pavements; and extending kerbs on both sides of the junction.

These are part of a major project the Council has been working on, to develop a new cycling and walking route from Finsbury Park to Victoria Park, which will be one of the main cycle parking locations during the 2012 Olympic and Paralympic Games. The closing date is 4 September. For info and to complete the survey call: 020 8356 2897 e-mail: info@hackney.gov.uk or visit: www.consultationfinder.com/hackney

Parking results in

RESULTS for the Controlled Parking Zone (CPZ) N consultation review in Homerton are now in. The Council would like to thank everyone who took part.

Views were sought on the hours parking controls should apply, design of the zone – including location, and the type of parking bays – and how controls should be enforced.

The Council also asked residents for their views on extending the zone, and most were in favour. This has led to Chatsworth Road, Elderfield Road, Glyn Road (from Rushmore Road to Elderfield Road), Lockhurst Road and Powerscroft Road being included.

Residents in these streets will be consulted about the design of the parking restrictions. For info call: 020 8356 8877; e-mail consultparking@hackney.gov.uk or to find out more about parking visit: www.hackney.gov.uk/parking

The Mayor & Councillors

Councillors are elected by Hackney residents and serve for four years.

The last borough elections were in May 2006.

Councillors have a range of responsibilites, including helping to oversee the Council and its services. They all hold advice surgeries where you can meet your local representative and ask them to take up issues that may be of concern.

Generally they can help with Council related matters, but if the issue is the responsibility of another person or organisation, they can often point you in the right direction and tell you who you need to see.

Hackney has 57 councillors representing areas called wards – illustrated in the map opposite.

IMPORTANT INFORMATION DURING JULY & AUGUST

Some councillors do not hold surgeries during the school summer holidays. To check whether your councillor is holding a surgery during this period call: 020 8356 3373; or visit: www.hackney.gov.uk/surgeries

'A BRILLIANT SUCCESS'

Shilpa Odedra, Mobile Provision Manager

SHILPA has been working for Hackney nearly two years and says she loves her job. Originally from Northamptonshire, she came to the capital 11 years ago to study sociology and social policy at the University of North London.

After graduating she worked with young people in Newham and Barnet, and then at Carshalton College, in Surrey. She came to Hackney in September 2007 to work on the purple bus service, which has been running since the early 2000s.

She says simply: "I thought it looked fun." And two years later she still thinks that. "I love it. I'm passionate about youth work. I want to get the best possible for young people and make it a brilliant success."

She adds: "Because we have been working on the buses for years we have built up a relationship with the young people. Its nice to see them developing from using the service to play, to doing their GCSE revision or looking for employment. It's nice to see them progress."

Purple patch

By Nick Rutherford

HUNDREDS of young people benefit from the services offered by the Council's two purple buses (right).

Each vehicle visits a different estate in the borough every day of the week. They offer a place where people aged from eight to 19 years – or up to 25 if they are registered as having a disability – can meet friends and get advice on anything, from career prospects to relationships.

Young people have chosen the activities available. These include help with revision for GCSEs; learning to type and use the internet; sports, health and beauty sessions; off-site trips such as to the theatre; and Easy Access point (CHECK). They also take part in performing arts activities.

Each bus employs a team of five youth workers, and outreach workers. One is lead by Shilpa Odedra and the other by Naomi Watson. Shilpa says: "We get a mix of girls and boys from different cultures and backgrounds. They all mix together.

"Young people in Hackney are the best that I've worked with so far. They are brilliant.

"What we offer is really led by what they want, so we are really interested in hearing their ideas."

Naomi says: "We build up a relationship with young people where they will come to us for advice, for example on whether they want a particular job. We are able to direct them."

The buses currently visit 12 estates on rotation every three months but it is hoped that this will increase to 14. They are mainly funded by the Council, and because of its provision for children aged between eight and 12, they are also allocated funding through the Children's Fund.
